MALAYSIA'S FEED, LIVESTOCK AND MEAT OVERVIEW AND OUTLOOK

POLICY SUPPORTING THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY IN MALAYSIA

The Third National Agriculture Policy (1984-2010) and National Agro-Food Policy (2011-2020) were designed to ensure the livestock industry remains significant as one of the most important sectors in the nation's economic growth. It enforces policies that support the livestock industry in Malaysia with strategies to develop the livestock industry and address issues and challenges such as:

INCREASING THE PRODUCTION OF ANIMAL FEEDS

01 Local animal feed production needs to meet the growing demand from the livestock industry. The government has provided incentives to encourage farmers and the private sector to produce fodder for ruminants and non-ruminants. At the same time, Malaysia Agricultural Research and Development also strengthened the R&D on animal feed production by using local raw materials and agricultural by-products. These animal feed formulations should be of high quality whilst maintaining their competitive price.

ELEVATING THE EFFICIENCY OF THE RUMINANTS INDUSTRY

02 Through this strategy, the focus is to increase the efficiency of meat production and become environment-friendly. Efforts also focus on increasing the productive ruminant population through effective breeding services, as well as improving the quality of local breeds through public-private partnership research. Through this strategy, the focus is to increase the efficiency of meat production and become environment-friendly.

MOVING TOWARDS A DISEASE-FREE NATION

03 The government is pushing to achieve a foot and mouth disease (FMD)-free nation through vaccine programmes. Nine zones have been recognised to be Newcastle disease-free, and five quarantined areas for birds and pigs have also been established in five production zones.
